Transcending Hesitation

There was once a man who went to church one day and asked: "Can it be that my zeal has deceived me, that I have taken the wrong road, and have not planned it well? Oh! If I might be freed from this uncertainty, and might have the firm conviction that I shall conquer and succeed in the end." And then a voice answered him: "And if you knew that for certain, what shall you do then? Act now as if you knew that for certain and you will not be confounded,"

- Vincent van Gogh

In one of his many letters to Theo, van Gogh described how he got his ideas. The trick, he said, was direct contact. To really immerse ourselves in whatever situation we are in without holding back. There, creativity could be found. And, at least while we are creating, peace.
